

BOARD APPROVES
ANNEXATION PLAN

The proposed annexation of a large portion of Colma to Daly City became a reality last Monday night by the action of the members of the Daly City Council in adopting an ordinance making final the annexation.

A number of Colma residents were present at the meeting and assured the members of the Council that the residents of the territory annexed will co-operate in every way possible with the Council in making future plans for the annexed district.

A communication was received from the San Mateo County Fall Flower Festival committee, inviting the members of the Council to attend the coming festival, which will be held at the San Mateo Junior College, San Mateo, October 23, 24 and 25.

A temporary permit was requested by the Castle Building Company, to erect a temporary structure on lot 18, block 1, Castle Gardens Tract. This building will be used as a warehouse in which to store tools and working implements. The matter was referred to the building inspector.

A request was received from the Pacific Gas & Electric Company for permission to set a 40-foot pole on the east line of Mission street, near the San Francisco-San Mateo county line. The request was referred to the superintendent of streets.

The library committee reported that 3,247 books were distributed during last month.

The monthly report of the poundward master was read and ordered filed and the monthly bills were read and ordered paid.

A number of Mission street property owners were present, and the proposed widening of Mission street was discussed at length.

ATTEMPTED THEFT
BRINGS JAIL TERM

Paul Farmer, 18, of Bakersfield, was arrested last Monday by Officer Schramm and Sunderland, at Wellington avenue and Mission street, when he was tampering with an automobile which he had planned to steal, as stated, so he would not have to hike to Monterey.

Upon being questioned, he admitted that he had stolen a search-light from a Ford coupe belonging to Mordecai Verne, of 503 Baden avenue, who was in the theatre at the time of the theft. He had planned to steal the machine but could not get it started.

Farmer was given a thirty-day sentence by Judge Ellis C. Johnson, who decided to give the boy a light sentence because of the fact that this was his first offence.

CORRECTIVE EXERCISES FOR CHILDREN AT ST. LUKE CLINIC

A posture examination was given recently in the Longfellow school and children will take corrective exercises as a result a group of fourteen at St. Luke's Clinic every Saturday morning at 9:40 A. M. These children were examined and enrolled last Saturday, August 22. Mrs. Charles Verbrugge, child hygiene chairman of the Longfellow unit, and the mothers of some of the children will act as a committee in charge of the class.

Longfellow Parent-Teachers Association conducted a shoe drive last week and through the co-operation of the teachers, the pupils brought in 110 pairs of shoes. Mrs. M. H. Williams, philanthropy chairman, assisted by Mrs. D. J. Irwin, Mrs. W. J. Hunter, and Mrs. Lawrence Fosberg, thrift chairman of the unit, delivered the shoes to the District Philanthropy Center, Monday morning, August 24.

Many of the Longfellow members have signed up and are ready to sew at the Monroe sewing center on Tuesday mornings, and also help at the Hearst center every Thursday.

An executive board meeting of the Longfellow Parent-Teachers Association will be held at the school, Tuesday, September 1, at 1:30 P. M.

"A GOOD LAWYER"
IS SERMON TOPIC

"If there were no bad people we could have no good lawyers"—and when we come to plead our cause before the Supreme Tribunal it might be a good thing to know where we can find a good lawyer. Come out to Grace Presbyterian church, corner of Hanover and Evergreen streets, 11 A. M. Sunday, and you will be told how to get the best lawyer—a lawyer who never lost a case. In the evening a song service with the new hymn books in use will be observed. The evening service is at 7:45.

DEATH RESULT OF DRINKING LYSOL

Last Tuesday tragedy entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Peck, of 301 San Mateo avenue. While Mrs. Peck was busily employed about her household task, her two children, Arlene and Mary Emma, found a bottle of lysol and drank the contents.

Arlene, the older of the two, came screaming to the startled mother: "Oh, mama, my mouth burns. Baby took some, too."

The mother saw the baby, Mary Emma, writing in agony on the floor. A friend called police headquarters, and Officer Ed Heim immediately responded to the call. The children were rushed to McGraw's Pharmacy, when the local doctors could not be reached. At the pharmacy the older child was administered an antidote by Dr. Lanthear, who happened to be in the store. It was impossible to give the younger victim anything, as they could not open her mouth.

The children were taken to South San Francisco hospital, where it was found upon examination that the youngest child was beyond human aid, she having passed away enroute to the hospital. The other child is still in a precarious condition at the hospital.

The unfortunate parents are in very straitened circumstances, due to the fact that the father has had no steady employment for some time past, being able to secure only a few dollars from reliable sources. He was commenting on a resolution passed recently by the Marysville board of school trustees, providing information concerning the Marysville schools must not be released to the press without first being approved by the trustees. "The people of California are entitled to know what is going on in their public schools," Kersey declared.

"Naturally we are not in favor of the publication of rumors or unauthenticated reports, but on the other hand, we most certainly would frown upon any action which would establish a 'gag' or censorship upon information from reliable sources." The superintendent said the proper place for school information to be presented to the public is in the columns of newspapers.

Statistics gathered at Sacramento show that judges are less inclined to dismiss cases against violators of the motor-vehicle laws. Records of the State motor-vehicle division show that 12,015 cases were taken to court during last July and of this number 246 were dismissed. During July, 1930, 1160 of 11,783 cases were dismissed. Of the 12,769 convicted cases in July, 1931, the number penalized for speeding totaled 7292. Fourteen speeding cases were dismissed. Vehicles carrying improperly adjusted lights resulted in 1096 cases in court, of which 137 were dismissed.

Last Sunday afternoon Betty Lorraine Valentino, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Valentino, was christened at Our Lady of Perpetual Help church, the Rev. Father Donohoe officiating. Mrs. Lorraine Wall acted as godmother and Mr. Robert Wall acted as godfather. After the christening, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lorenz, grandparents of Baby Betty Lorraine, entertained at a dinner given at their home on Mission street. Those enjoyed Mr. and Mrs. Lorenz's hospitality were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gross, of San Francisco, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Wall, of Daly City, Mr. and Mrs. George Lagomarsino and George and Gene Lagomarsino, of Colma, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Valentino and Ernest and Josephine Valentino, of San Francisco, Mr. Alford, of San Francisco, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Valentino and daughter Betty Lorraine, Miss Alice Lorenz and Mr. Henry Lorenz, Jr. Betty Lorraine was the recipient of many beautiful gifts. In the evening many friends dropped in to extend their best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Valentino and their young daughter.

HILLSBOROUGH LOSES
IN SUIT FOR DAMAGES

As the result of an automobile accident several months ago, Joseph Dento, of San Mateo, has been awarded a judgment of $1,500 against the town of Hillsborough, according to records on file in the county clerk's office. The judgment was awarded Monday afternoon by Superior Judge George H. Buck.

MENLO PARK COUNCIL
LOWERS CITY TAX RATE

Menlo Park city council set the new tax rate for the city last Tuesday night at 95 cents, which is five cents lower than last year's rate. The new rate received unanimous endorsement. The council also arranged for the purchase of a traffic signal to be installed at Santa Cruz avenue and El Camino Real.

SUPERVISORS DIVIDED
ON SWART SUCCESSOR

The San Mateo county board of supervisors failed to select a successor to District Attorney Franklin Swart, the newly appointed superior judge, last Tuesday.

Edmund Scott, assistant district attorney, who was generally believed to be in line for promotion by the board of supervisors, was favored by Supervisors Thomas L. Hickey, of South San Francisco, and Dr. C. V. Thompson.

LOCAL MERCHANTS TO STAGE OUTING

All aboard for the grand picnic! Next Sunday is the day! Let it be a day of happiness and joy for all who are fortunate enough to go! Oak Cove, just west of San Mateo, is the place. It is a beautiful spot, of easy and convenient access to the people of Daly City. Let's go. Don't make excuses, go! Everybody is invited, and everybody will be welcome. So, aside your troubles and your worries for one day and have a good time.

The caravan will assemble at the City Hall at 9 A. M., and, headed by a band of the State and Daly City bands, will move north on Irvington Templeton to Mission street, and thence on Mission street and the highway to the picnic grounds. The band which will be at the head of the parade will accompany the picnicers to the grounds, and there will be music all day. There will be dancing, games, and races.

While everybody is expected to bring a well filled basket of lunch, there will be plenty of coffee (but bring your own cups), hot dogs, ice cream, bread and rolls, free. In short, there will be plenty to eat and plenty to drink, and plenty of entertainment and amusement for the entire day.

The committee in charge of this affair have worked diligently and have spared no pains to make this the greatest picnic that Daly City has ever had.

Not only will the city officials be there, but every official in the county and their deputies have been invited, and most of them will attend. The people of Daly City are most cordially invited.

The following are members of the committee: Dr. F. P. Callen, A. Vireno, Mayor H. H. Smith, John J. Fahey, W. H. Clay, Peter Pavlos, Henry Warshawski, A. Milo, Albert Witt, Fred Mather, Ed Knowles, Max Bloom, Julius Twisten, S. Planks, George Augustien, H. T. Rolff, A. J. Dalton, G. Bertoli, and H. M. Cohn.

To find the place, take the main highway to San Mateo, turn to the right at Mills Memorial hospital, and go about a mile and a half west on the road leading to Half Moon Bay. W. H. CLAY, Rec. Secretary.

SUPERVISORS DIVIDED
ON SWART SUCCESSOR

The San Mateo county board of supervisors failed to select a successor to District Attorney Franklin Swart, the newly appointed superior judge, last Tuesday.

Edmund Scott, assistant district attorney, who was generally believed to be in line for promotion by the board of supervisors, was favored by Supervisors Thomas L. Hickey, of South San Francisco, and Dr. C. V. Thompson.

Gilbert Ferrell, Redwood City attorney, was favored by Mrs. Rosalie M. Brown and John W. Poole, of Redwood City. Manuel Francis, chairman, declined to cast the deciding vote.

GOOD HORSES FOR TANFORAN MEET

Stuart Polk is coming to Tanforan with a large stable. A recent count showed the veteran had thirty thoroughbreds under his care. He is likely to be one of the first to ship for the meet to open Friday, November 6, and as is his custom can be depended upon to have his runners in the pink of condition right at the start of hostilities.

Polk is of the old school of trainers, but has not been distanced by any means by the younger fellows, and saddles many winners East and West. Last fall at Tanforan his Tonto Rock led home one of the best fields of the session in the San Mateo Handicap. He usually has a stakes performer or two, wherever he goes. When it comes to making up a program of "overnights," Polk's horses are always serviceable.

Fred Almy has scored for Polk on a number of tracks and is likely to be heard from early in the Tanforan period of racing. The youngster is almost invariably the topweight in a handicap, a sure sign of class in a two year old.

Polk is a developer of jockeys as well as of gallopers, and seldom is without a "comer" or two to pilot his horses. He "discovered" the Fator brothers, Alfred Johnson, who made the California bred Morvich last the mile and a quarter of the Kentucky Derby, Lloyd Fage and others.

Old-timers recall the achievements of Polk's Gemmell at Emeryville and marvel the owner-trainer still retains his almost uncanny skill in having a thoroughbred fit when it pays best to have him that way.

LONGFELLOW P. T. A. MEMBERS
ENJOY THEIR ANNUAL OUTING

The members of the Longfellow Parent-Teachers' Association held their annual picnic and outing on Thursday of last week in San Mateo. About forty women met at Geneva avenue, where they boarded the white school car and set out for the picnic grounds. At 3:30 the white school car met the members at San Mateo and brought them back. The affair was a huge success, and thanks are due the Market Street Railway and Mrs. Hunter and her committee.

LOCAL SPORTSMEN FAVOR
SHORTENING DUCK SEASON

The San Mateo County Fish and Game Protective Association last Tuesday went on record as favoring the shortening of the opening duck season. A proclamation shortening the season for duck shooting this fall and winter was signed by President Hoover Tuesday. The purpose of the proclamation being for conservation purposes.

The action was looked upon by the local organization as a good experimental measure to be tried for a year or more. Instead of the usual three-month season open to hunters the measure shortens the time to one month, a period from October 16 to November 16.

DALY CITY TEAM
VICTIM OF UMPIRE

The members of the Daly City Merchants' baseball team feel that they should have chalked up their third straight victory last Sunday.

A poor decision on the part of the umpire gave Redwood City two runs in the eighth inning, enabling that team to score a 5 to 4 decision.

Creighton Davies had pitched a wonderful game up to the deciding frame. He allowed Redwood City only seven hits and one earned run before giving way to Bonetti. Two walks in the eighth inning caused his removal.

Bonetti was charged with the defeat when Hatley singled with the bases loaded, and the next batter, Maloney, drew a base on balls. The score was 4 to 3 and two men were out previous to the above events.

The contest was a nip and tuck affair throughout. Besides the pitching duel between Davies and Hatley, several long hits kept the fans on edge constantly.

Redwood City took the lead in the second inning, scoring one run on a hit by Jordan and Hawley's error on an easy fly ball. The "Little Giant" made up for this boot by clouting a home run in the following frame. Rettig was on first base at the time.

A circuit clout by Duino in the third stanza put the game on even terms again. The Merchants had just cleared the bags with a double play. Another run came across for Redwood City in the next inning when Plansky misjudged a fly ball that resulted in a triple.

Daly City was on the short end of a 3 to 2 score going into the sixth frame. Three singles in succession put over the tying run. There were two outs at the time. The same situation produced the Merchants' fourth tally in the following time at bat.

Then came the disastrous eighth inning. Jordan flew out to shortstop. R. Harruff, the leading batter of the day, singled; his brother followed with a popup to Hawley, Farrel and Culler drew bases on balls, and Davies had Hatley struck out, but the man behind the plate failed to see the perfect strike.

Charley Aiello was the fielding star of the game, turning in several hard catches in left field.

LEGISLATURE MAY TAKE UP
UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEMS

A despatch from Sacramento announces that a special session of the California legislature for unemployment relief loomed as the result of Governor James Rolph, Jr.'s cabinet meeting of department executives to map out aid for an expected army of jobless during winter months.

"I am going to call a special session—the legislature must share in the responsibility of dire unemployment problems," Governor Rolph announced. "I had previously planned to summon the legislature in January to consider water and oil conservation and the unemployment crisis can be met at the same time."

It was the governor's first definite statement that he had linked unemployment with the two other problems of water and oil as subjects of a special session.

Coincident with his legislative plans, Governor Rolph announced the appointment of a commission of five members to devise plans for winter employment relief, as authorized by the last legislature.

SCHOOL BUS HIT BY CAR

Between fifteen and twenty Redwood City grammar school children were imperiled Wednesday morning when the school bus taking them to school was struck by a car driven by a woman at Cleveland and Jefferson avenues, in West Redwood.

SWART APPOINTED
SUPERIOR JUDGE

District Attorney Franklin Swart was selected last Monday by Governor Rolph to preside over the second and newly created division of San Mateo county's Superior Court.

Judge Swart has had a notable career during his twenty years as district attorney. Born at Paris, Indiana, Judge Franklin Swart received his early education at Goshen, Indiana, and later attended Danville college. He came to California in 1899 and completed his education at the law school of Stanford university.

Following practice in San Francisco, he moved to Redwood City, where he was elected district attorney after having won recognition as one of the best trial lawyers in California. He assumed office January 1, 1911.

During his years as district attorney he conducted prosecutions which attracted nation-wide attention. Among them were the noted William Hightower murder case in 1920, the prosecution of Dr. Northcott, also a murder case, and prosecution of Dr. Galen R. Hickok in the famous Salada Beach castle mystery. Convictions were won in each case. He also conducted the Southern Pacific strike murder cases of Daly City, which resulted in the conviction of five men on murder charges.

During the World War, Judge Swart was a member of the four-minute speaking staff of the county and served also on the council of defense.

Judge Swart was married December 25, 1914, and has one son, Franklin Rufus. Mrs. Swart is the former Miss Adele R. Beckman, daughter of a well-known Sacramento family.

He is a member of the Masonic lodge, the Odd Fellows and San Mateo Lodge No. 1112, B. P. O. Elks.

THE EAGLES NEST

The Associated Aerie meeting of the Eagles was held in Daly City on Thursday evening of last week, with a very large crowd present. Redwood City, who is leading the Aeries in the membership contest, brought fifty-five members, whereas Daly City had sixty present. After the meeting an entertainment of vaudeville acts was featured, presented by the Daly City Theatre. A buffet luncheon was served in the Eagles Hall.

This Saturday, August 29, is Ladies' night. A wonderful program has been arranged—vaudeville, contests and dancing. It is given for the purpose of letting the ladies know what and who the Eagles are. We want you to come and bring that next door neighbor and his wife. No children allowed, unless accompanied by their parents.

The horseshoe pitchers are working out every Monday, Wednesday and Friday evening, at 6 o'clock, at the park. Several games have been arranged and anyone interested should come out on the nights mentioned.

The baseball team is working out every Tuesday and Friday evening at the high school grounds. The team is functioning with unexpected energy, and recruits are becoming more and more numerous. Any Eagle wishing to try out should report on Tuesday or Friday evening at 6 o'clock at the high school grounds. A game will be played with Aerie 61 of San Francisco on September 15. They have promised to bring their band and a large crowd of rooters with them.

The tennis team of Lasswell and Smith, Jr., is open to compete with any players seeking competition.

A basketball team is in the making, and any Eagle wishing to join should get in touch with Hugh Smith, Jr.

Can you play whist?
Can you play checkers?
Can you play chess?

The members are hot for competitors. Step up and say so.

ESCAPED FROM COUNTY JAIL
BUT IS CAPTURED IN L. A.

Lloyd Jones, who escaped from the San Mateo county jail in Redwood over a wall, was captured in Los Angeles. Jones will not be returned to San Mateo until after Los Angeles deals with him on a charge of stealing an automobile, it was said. Sheriff James J. McGrath wired the southern police that Jones had escaped and would probably visit his mother and sister there. He did and his capture followed.

Eugene Alexander Bannerot, 91, retired machinist and one of the early pioneers of Burlingame, died Tuesday night at his home, 1212 Bayswater avenue. He had been a resident of Burlingame for more than 25 years.

HERE AND THERE

Feeling a necessity for reducing expenses, Willis Grist, manager of a theatre in Lynchburg, Va., discharged his wife, who played the theatre organ.

In his will, David E. Simmons, of Worcester, Mass., left $1 to his son, explaining that this amount "represented my estimation of his love and esteem for me."

"If the thieves will come back they can have the coop, too," advertised Jesse Coppenbarger, of Wapella, Ill., after eighty chickens were stolen from him.

Accused of stealing dirt from a park, Sam Pastor, of New York City, was arrested and given a jail sentence.

On the back of an envelope, Mrs. Mary Council, of Columbus, Ohio, wrote her will disposing of an estate in excess of $4,600.

A blacksnake six feet long was found by Mrs. Grover Seal, of Kimball, Va., coiled on the top of the warming oven of her kitchen range.

Arthur R. Davis, of Greensburg, N. Y., recently moved his house into the middle of the street and left it, forcing traffic to detour around the one-story frame obstacle.

Searching for counterfeit money, the police of London wrecked the interior of five houses, tearing out the floors and pulling down walls.

Mrs. Clara Hooper, of Hammond, Indiana, had her husband arrested for knocking her down and sitting on her, and then she begged the court to release him.

Mrs. Annie J. Murray, of Sanford, Maine, celebrated her seventy-fifth birthday by chopping a large pile of wood.

Police of Suitland, Maine, were called on recently to put an end to petting parties in a church as "bottles and other debris" indicated "some kind of a party had been held there."

Mrs. Lester Arron, of El Paso, Texas, refused to wear stockings, her husband told police, and finally left him because he objected to her bare limbs.

The marriage ceremony for Miss Mariel Ball and William Peters, of Mansfield, England, was performed by the bride's father, grandfather and uncle, all Methodist ministers.

William Stringfellow, living near San Francisco, summoned as a witness, walked ten miles to the court house and then learned that the trial had been postponed.

"I didn't mind just plain dishes, your honor, but when she threw my old shaving mug at me it broke; well, that was the last straw," explained David Shapiro when he sued his wife for a divorce in Chicago.

Two detectives hidden beneath the pulpit in a church in Liverpool, England, found that the verger, James Ellison, was the thief who had repeatedly robbed the offertory box.

Julius Hill, of Albemarle, N. C., was sentenced to four months in the county jail for stealing a quart of milk from a dairy.

When Mr. and Mrs. Jack Powers, of Teague, Texas, moved one block down Main street to their new home, they took along their vegetable garden, transplanting it into new beds without the loss of a plant.

Included among unusual calls recorded in the police report book in Seattle, Wash., is a request for help in redeeming a strayed chicken from a neighbor's yard.

After thinking things over for 24 hours, Samuel H. Yonge, of Richmond, Va., gave in and admitted he was 81 years old in order to get a license to marry Mrs. Lutie R. Archer.

When officers saw a fountain of foam shoot out of an automobile owned by Laverne Burrows, of Ord, Neb., they investigated and found that four bottles of beer had exploded.

"I had to go shopping and to call on friends without either shoes or stockings," was the charge of Mrs. Anna Ochs, of Chicago, when she sued for a divorce.

Charging that his son was caught in a stalled automobile in a flooded street, and that the boy is now so afraid of water that he won't even bathe, J. R. Warson, of Kansas City, is suing the city for $1,000.

Clarence Warren accused his pet monkey of the theft when he was arrested in Chicago for shoplifting, saying that the monkey would steal things in the stores and hide them in his pockets when he wasn't looking.

Amid the applause of his fellow-townsmen, 40-year-old F. H. Stickney received his diploma from a high school in Middletown, Conn.

P. T. A. DOINGS IN NORTHERN PART OF SAN MATEO COUNTY

The members of Visitation Valley P. T. A. of San Mateo County have changed the name of their association to Bay Shore School P. T. A., because of the confusion of the San Francisco and San Mateo schools in Visitation Valley.

Bay Shore School P. T. A. started their first meeting of the year on August 14. Many things of importance were discussed and decided by the thirty-six members present.

During vacation period a group of women met at the home of Mrs. Neklason, on Oriente street, to work on philanthropics. Due to the efforts of this group the philanthropic committee was born. Meetings are to be held the fourth Friday of each month at the home of Mrs. Neklason. Mrs. Emma Shaw was appointed chairman of this committee, with Mrs. Neklason and Mrs. Gray assisting.

The question of milk for undernourished children was discussed and the P. T. A. will furnish such children whose parents cannot afford to pay for the milk. This school has not had milk before, and it is just starting. The cost of the milk will be 20 cents a week.

It was decided to hold a whist party to swell the philanthropic fund.

The local Girl Scout troop, sponsored by the Bay Shore P. T. A., is under the leadership of Mrs. Victoria Pasch, who gave a very interesting talk on Scout work. A cash donation was given the troop to help with their supplies.

It was decided to purchase grass seed for the lawn. Mr. Dunn volunteered to plant and care for the lawn.

Mrs. Maritz and Miss Taylor will share the pennant this month, both having the same number of representatives at the meeting.

Six new members were given rose buttonnieres, as they joined this year. The Association has Mrs. Greenwood, of McDonald, to thank for these flowers.

It is to be remembered that a school is a small one, with only 150 children, and though small, a member is a live wire which makes one glorious, happy circuit. Must we get moral support, looking at many wires of the P. G. & E., knowing each little wire does its part at the appointed time, without cord and confusion. Really, folks are a really worth while group here, even if we are a long way from the rest of the units in the county. Come and visit. We will be glad to share our happiness with you.

Throughout the Entire Year...

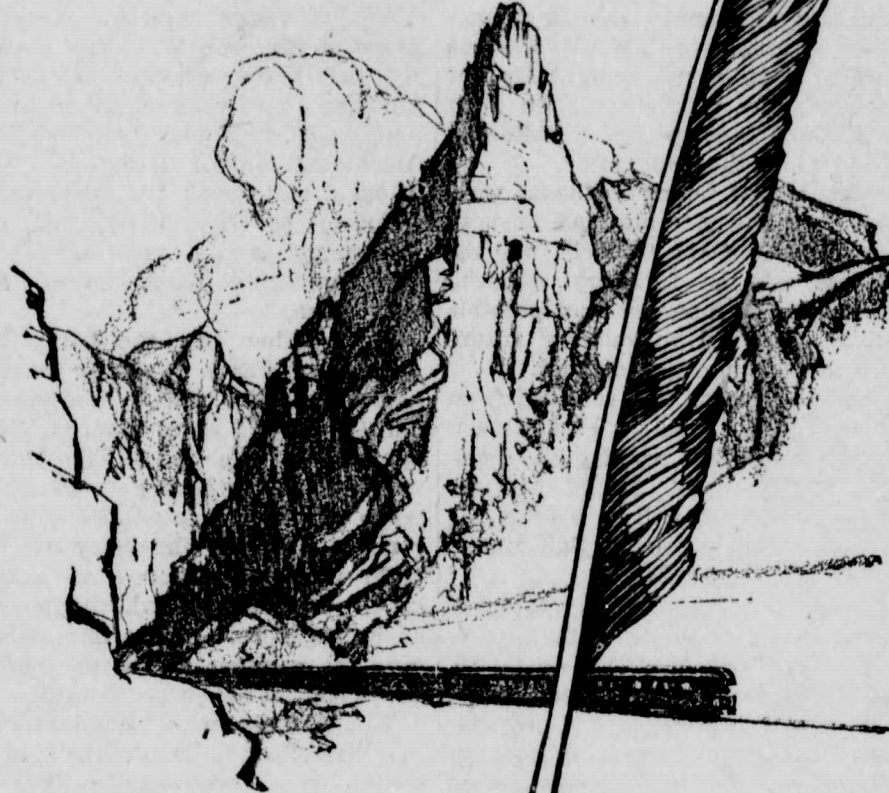

next meeting will be held on September 11, at the school.

Mrs. Dowdell, president of the Bay Shore school P. T. A., with Mrs. Franzen, Mrs. Bacon and Mrs. Coffin, attended the Seventeenth District P. T. A. meeting at San Mateo, on Friday, August 21. All report a wonderful time and a better meeting than ever.

Reports on the convention were very interesting. It is to your advantage to attend these meetings; they are worth their weight in gold, that is if you are interested enough to really learn worth while things.

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh has spent a total of 4,100 hours in the air.

Four people have purchased the Buick Eight to every one buyer of any other of the thirteen eights in Buick's price range during the twelve months since its introduction. This four-to-one preference—in days when America is scrutinizing values more closely than ever before—fully confirms the value leadership of The Eight as Buick Builds It. It is this outstanding value which causes 89 per cent of all Buick owners to buy Buicks again and again.

*Buick has sold four times as many eights as the next most popular eight in its field, August 1, 1930, through July, 1931, according to official figures by R. L. Polk & Co.

CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

In a move to assist needy families of the community, Napa County Farm Bureau directors have asked local school trustees to delay school opening until September 14. Otherwise, itinerant workers will receive $50,000 to be spent by growers in the prune harvest, they declared. Schools at St. Helena and Calistoga have agreed not to open until after the crop has been picked.

The largest helium storage and purification plant in the world will be erected at Sunnyvale to inflate the huge naval dirigibles which will be based there. Besides the 2,000,000 cubic foot gas holder, high pressure tanks of more than 1,000,000 cubic feet capacity will be installed. This was the announcement at naval headquarters as new specifications for various parts of the base continued to arrive from Washington.

A call for bids on eight new contracts for flood-control projects with an estimated cost of $194,000, which, when awarded, will give 450 more men employment, was ordered recently by the Los Angeles Board of Supervisors. The work consists in repairs to Devil's Gate Dam in the Arroyo Seco; levee work on the Los Angeles River and the Rio Hondo, a coating of gunite for the new Big Tujunga Dam and three contracts for exploration work in San Gabriel Canyon at the sites of the new dams that are to take the place of the abandoned high-dam project at the Forks Site.

It used to be just plain, hard work to clean the trout hatchery at Yosemite National Park, but it isn't now. Visitors have been in the habit of throwing pebbles into the aquarium to make the fish rise and strike. Then Peter Topp, in charge of the hatchery, and whose duty it was to clean out the pebbles, had an inspiration. He threw a shiny coin into the water. The trout responded much better than with pebbles. So now, when a crowd of pebble throwers gather at the hatchery, Topp ambles up, nonchalantly throws in a coin and starts others doing it. Topp doesn't mind cleaning the tank now.

Cotton growers of California appealed to the State Department of Agriculture recently to stiffen up the quarantine measures against the pink boll worm in Arizona. Through the California Cotton Co-operative Association, the growers were assured that the department would take every precaution in the matter in order that the State's cotton acreage may be protected from the pest. The association wired Dudley Moulton, director of the State Department of Agriculture, asking assurance of protection and the department replied that Mr. Moulton is in Southern California seeing to it that every precaution is being taken to protect the California cotton districts, which are the only areas in the country free from pests.

Theodore J. Roche, San Francisco attorney, after previously refusing to accept the non-salaried directorship of the newly created State Department of Motor Vehicles, has decided to take the post as soon as personal business affairs permit, Governor Rolph announced. Roche advised the governor he would be ready in three or four weeks to assume the directorship and help reorganize the department. His decision was made after it developed that E. Raymond Cato, highway patrol superintendent, who was named acting director, could not legally hold the latter post. Daniel J. O'Brien, state director of penology, will take charge of the department as acting director until Roche qualifies. Attorney General U. S. Webb ruled that Cato could not legally handle two jobs in one department, even if one carried no salary.

Attorney General U. S. Webb recently ruled against proposed lease of State tide and submerged lands for oil pipes from Kettleman Hills. The legal opinion was rendered to W. S. Kingsbury, chief of the division of State lands, and expressed belief there is no authority for the leasing project under terms of an act passed by the 1929 legislature. The ruling disclosed lease of tidelands has been sought at Estero Bay, San Luis Obispo county, to permit installation of pipe lines for carrying oil from Kettleman Hills and vicinity to tankers anchored in the bay. The 1929 legislature prohibited further leasing of State tidelands for oil production. An act passed by the 1931 legislature, authorizes the State director of finance to grant tideland leases for oil drilling, but Governor Rolph has emphatically declared that no such leases on State tidelands will be allowed.

Only 3 per cent of those who took the last examination for licenses to practice medicine in California were failures, it was declared by Charles B. Pinkham, secretary of the State Board of Medical Examiners. He cited the percentage as indicative of the high standard of this State's medical schools. There were 126 successful applicants.

Suggestion of the Federal Farm Board that cotton men rip a third of their cotton, has barely evoked any reaction in Kern county, according to interviews with growers.

The Porterville Chamber of Commerce has been advised by Miss Ruth Nash, head of the county welfare department, to report to her at once all destitute Mexicans of that city, as well as those in trouble with the law. The county, Miss Nash said, will then take steps to arrange for transportation of the Mexicans to the border, under a new arrangement made by their own government for their care.

Rayon is now successfully made from the entire cotton stalk, both stem and bolls. This opens up a new use for the plant, according to the American Cotton Co-operative Association, which has been aiding in the experimental work. The next step in the work is to increase the growth of stalk as well as bolls to the point where plants approach in size those of the San Joaquin Valley. Then, the co-operative believes, cotton can compete economically with wood pulp in the manufacture of rayon. The California Cotton Co-operative Association reports that it is watching this development very closely because California cotton closely approaches the requirements for the silk-like product.

Of interest to live stock and poultry owners and exhibitors throughout California is the construction of two new exposition buildings on the California State Fairgrounds in Sacramento. Both will be dedicated on September 5, the opening day of the fair. One building will house the poultry and rabbit exhibits, the other the sheep and swine entries. The latter will replace a number of unsightly wooden sheds and barns which have been used at previous State fairs. The new buildings, constructed of brick and concrete, and with every facility of exhibiting poultry and live stock to the best advantage, are being erected at a cost of $200,000. Fred H. Bixby of Long Beach, director in charge of the live-stock department of the State Fair, predicts that the new exhibit structures will result in a record-breaking number of entries at the State Fair this year.

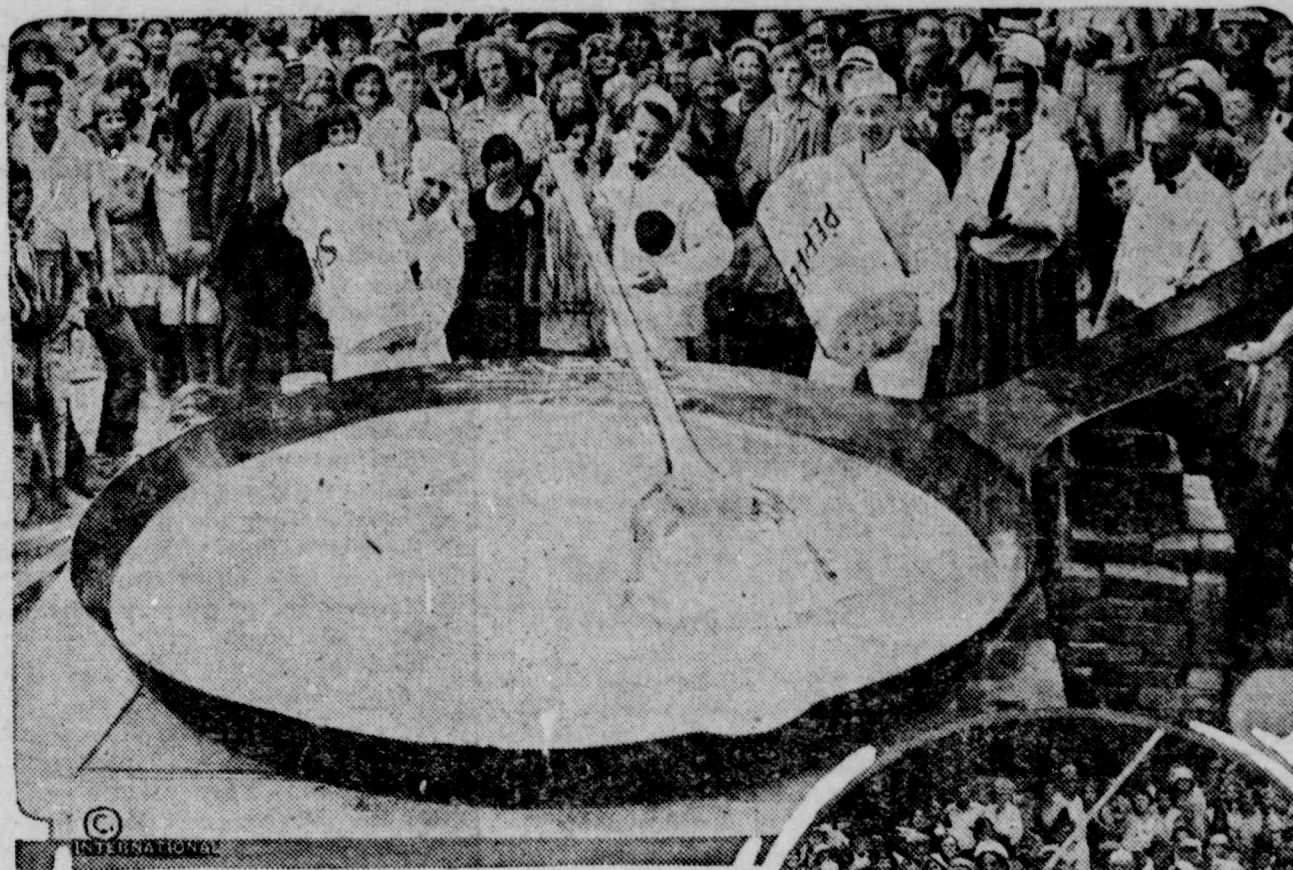

Vierling Kersey, state superintendent of public instruction, declared the department of education does not favor censorship of school news coming from reliable sources. He was commenting on a resolution passed recently by the Marysville board of school trustees, providing information concerning the Marysville schools must not be released to the press without first being approved by the trustees. "The people of California are entitled to know what is going on in their public schools," Kersey declared. "Naturally we are not in favor of the publication of rumors or unauthenticated reports, but on the other hand, we most certainly would frown upon any action which would establish a 'gag' or censorship upon information from reliable sources." The superintendent said the proper place for school information to be presented to the public is in the columns of newspapers.

Statistics gathered at Sacramento show that judges are less inclined to dismiss cases against violators of the motor-vehicle laws. Records of the State motor-vehicle division show that 13,015 cases were taken to court during last July and of this number 246 were dismissed. During July, 1930, 1160 of 11,783 cases were dismissed. Of the 12,769 convicted cases in July, 1931, the number penalized for speeding totaled 7292. Fourteen speeding cases were dismissed. Vehicles carrying improperly adjusted lights resulted in 1096 cases in court, of which 137 were dismissed. The total of 688 reckless drivers were haled into court during the month and close upon the heels of these went 631 persons who drove upon the wrong side of roads. Other violations were 491 answering to the section prohibiting unnecessary noise and smoke; 437 who drove without operator's license and 405 who displayed license plates improperly. Other offenders, listed as miscellaneous totaled 1174.

Exports of fresh fruits from the Pacific states outstripped last year's business by a wide margin in the first half of 1931, according to compilations made of reports of Pacific Coast custom houses. California's foreign shipments more than doubled and spectacular gains in value and volume were made in the Pacific Northwest. Oranges shipped by Los Angeles in the first six months of this year were of greater value than the entire state's shipments of all fresh fruits combined in the like portion of 1930. They totaled 946,397 boxes and were valued at $2,519,509, compared with the 1930 first half shipments amounting to $590,493. San Francisco shipped $699,624 in a varied assortment of fruits, apples taking the lead over oranges, the first place fruit, in 1930. In the first half of 1930 the San Francisco shipments were $532,355. California's total shipments of fresh fruits were greater than $3,527,574. Full figures were not available in the absence of complete export data from San Diego.

Water in California's streams, lakes and reservoirs is the lowest that has ever been recorded, it was learned after a recent statewide check. A new low level was reached by the Sacramento River at Red Bluff recently when the Government gauge registered .08 below zero. The flow was only 2580 cubic feet a second. In the San Joaquin River, the Vernalis gauge showed a flow of 200 feet. From Tulare County came reports that both forks of the Box Creek Canyon creek and Sugar Loaf creek were entirely dry.

CHEHALIS MAKES THE WORLD'S BIGGEST OMELET

CHEHALIS, an attractive town in Washington, is the center of the great egg and poultry producing district of the Pacific Northwest, and every year it lets the world know this by holding a festival. The feature of this year's doings there was the making of the largest omelet ever cooked. Ten thousand eggs were used, and the cooks were armed with huge paddles and salt and pepper shakers. To grease the immense frying pan, Miss Thora Yeager skated about it with slabs of bacon strapped to her shoes. The pan was eight feet in diameter and weighed a thousand pounds.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

MORE VISITORS TO PADDY'S POND

WHEN Honker the Goose dropped into the pond of Paddy the Beaver deep in the Green Forest on his way to the Sunny Southland other eyes than those of Peter Rabbit saw him. That clear "Honk, honk, honk," with which he had shouted to the world below the message that Jack Frost and Rough Brother North Wind were coming had been heard by many ears. It had reached way in to the den of Old Man Coyote up in the Old Pasture and he had hastily thrust his head out to look up in the sky. He had seen Honker turn and lead his followers down, down, and finally disappear in the Green Forest.

Old Man Coyote had licked his chops hungrily and grinned as he watched. "They are tired and are going to spend the night in the pond of Paddy the Beaver," thought he. Then he yawned and went back to finish his nap and dream pleasant dreams of a fat goose for dinner. You see he knew that it would be of no use to go over to Paddy's pond until after Honker and his followers had had time to go to sleep.

Reddy and Granny Fox had heard that message from the sky and they, too, had seen Honker lead the way down into the Green Forest and had guessed just where he had gone. Reddy was for going over there at once, but wise old Granny knew better than to do that.

"You think you know it all," she said sharply, "but you've got a lot to learn yet, Reddy Fox. It isn't every day that we have a chance to get a goose for dinner, and if it were left to you we wouldn't have any chance at all. Honker isn't like those foolish geese in Farmer Brown's yard. Oh, my no! You've got to have all your wits about you when you try to catch Honker. In fact, I don't expect that we are going to catch Honker at all, smart as we are. But I do think we may catch one of the youngsters of whom he is the leader, and that will be much better. Honker is old and tough. Perhaps we can catch two. But whatever you do, Reddy Fox, don't go near the pond of Paddy the Beaver until I tell you it is time. Honker mustn't even suspect that we know that he has come."

"You Think You Know It All," She Said Sharply.

Reddy promised to do just as old Granny Fox said, although he was so impatient that he just had to go down on the Green Meadows and hunt for Danny Meadow Mouse so as to keep from thinking of Honker the Goose and his followers. So it was that Honker and the other geese, of whom he was the leader, went to sleep without hearing or seeing a single thing to make them anxious or suspicious. And so it was that in the still small hours of the night when those who sleep at night are usually deepest in dreamland stealthily trotted softly through the Green Forest toward the pond of Paddy the Beaver.

Mother's Cook Book

Quiet minds cannot be perplexed or frightened, but go on in fortune or misfortune at their own private pace, like a clock in a thunder storm.

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS

THIS is the time of the year when a chilled soup is often more agreeable than a hot one.

Orange Soup.

Heat a quart of orange juice in the top of a double boiler, over hot water; when hot add a tablespoonful of cornstarch which has been cooked until smooth in boiling water after moistening with cold water. Cook and stir until perfectly well blended, adding a clove or two for additional flavor, and removing them when serving.

Glorified Pudding.

Wash one-half cupful of rice and put it, with two-thirds of a cupful of brown sugar, one-fourth of a package of sliced dates, and one quart of milk, in a deep baking dish. Sprinkle with a half teaspoonful of salt and bake in a moderate oven for two to three hours. Stir often during the first half hour of cooking to prevent a crust from forming. By adding a half cupful of suet lightly mixed with two tablespoonfuls of flour, this will make a very good suet pudding. Have the suet put through the food chopper. This forms a rich brown crust on top. Serve with a hard sauce or with cream if the suet is not used.

Cherry Pudding.

Beat the yolks of two eggs with one-fourth of a cupful of sugar. Blend two tablespoonfuls of cooking oil with one-fourth cupful of sugar and add to the egg yolks. Sift one and one-half cupfuls of flour, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder, with one-half teaspoonful of salt and add to the first mixture with three-eighths of a cupful of cherry juice, beating and mixing well. Boil one-half cupful of irup until it threads and pour over the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Fold this into the cake mixture, flavor with almond, pour into a well greased cake pan, cover the top with fresh cherries. Bake one hour.

Jam Cake.

Cream one-half cupful of sweet fat, add one cupful of sugar, and two well beaten eggs. Sift one and one-half cupfuls of flour with one-half teaspoonful each of soda, cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg and allspice, and add the creamed sugar mixture alternately with one-half cupful of buttermilk. Fold in one-half cupful of jam, one-half cupful each of citron cut thin and chopped nuts. Bake forty-five minutes.

CALM

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

SOMETIMES in summer you will find a lake
No storms disturb. No rolling billows break

Upon its shore. It is a place of peace.

Yes, here it seems the things that trouble cease
And trouble man no more. No thunders roll

Across the sky, across the human soul.
Be not deceived; no lake, however still,

But has its winters, as all waters will.

Sometimes in living someone you may find

To whom Dame Fortune must be always kind.

The voice so quiet, dignified the mien,
That they remind you of that sylvan scene.

Pain, grief and anger, they know none of these.

The little lakes so far from wider seas.

Be not deceived. The calm may have their care.

A greater burden they more bravely bear.

There is no shelter from the storms of life.

We do but differ in the way its strife is suffered, in the way its grief is borne.

They feel the most who do least loudly mourn.

The aspen quivers when unmoved the palm;

In controversy greatness is most calm.

And they perhaps may hold the dear most dear

Who pay the tribute of the unshed tear.

In a moderate oven in a square pan. Cover with any desired icing.

Orange Blossom Salad.

Peel the oranges carefully and separate into sections, to resemble a flower. Place the orange on a curled leaf of lettuce, moisten the whole with french dressing, dredge with the coconut frostettes and top with a spoonful of mayonnaise and whipped cream.

A simple and most delightful cocktail for a company luncheon is grapefruit juice or canned grapefruit with a maraschino cherry and a bit of the cordial for flavor.

WHY HE WAS GOOD

Sandy was running for the office of assemblyman. He was the main speaker at a political gathering in his old home town. His friends, Gavin and Tammas, were listening with a conscious racial pride at his smooth flow of argument and persuasion. When he had completed his speech, Gavin and Tammas looked at one another with real feeling, and Gavin whispered to Tammas:

"Tammas, 'tis a right good speech he's made 'em; do you ken?"

"Oo, that it is," commented Gavin. "The Scotch, ye weel ken, are good speechmakers. And hoo comes 'tis aye so?"

Tammas looked serious.

"I dinna ken, Gavin," he replied thoughtfully, "unless—unless it is that the ability to speak in public is a gift."—Forbes Magazine.

"THE GREEKS HAD A WORD FOR IT" COMING TO GEARY THEATRE

Those three glittery New York moths who, under Playwright Zoe Akin's apt ministrations, have their gusty being in "The Greeks Had a Word for It" are to be revealed on the stage of the Geary Theatre, San Francisco, when Belasco and Curran offer this widely discussed play for a limited engagement starting Monday evening, August 31.

To enact the stimulating adventures of the three girls the Messrs. Belasco and Curran are sending to San Francisco, Dorothy Hall, who played in the original New York cast; Wanda Lyon, a feature last season with Al Jolson in "Wunderbar," and Elda Vokel, a beautiful brunette who is said to be a great "find." Armand Kaliz and Montague Love, equally well known on stage and screen, are also in the cast.

"The Greeks Had a Name for It" was the most widely discussed and one of the most popular of all last season's New York hits. Its three principal characters are butterflies of the night world. They toil not, neither do they spin, but when it comes to extracting coin of the realm from wealthy old gentlemen—my, how they shine.

William Keighley staged the "Greeks" for the producers and is said to again have scored with his expert direction. Los Angeles made a lot of fuss over Miss Akin's play and it is now packing the Belasco Theatre. All indications are that it will do as well or better in these, a trifle more sophisticated parts.

THE STORY

Harold Norman Atridge, an orphan, lives with his great aunt Matilda, who reared him. At her death he finds himself penniless. At the close of the war he gets work in a bank. Taking a message to Marjorie Clarence, he finds her father in the throes of delirium tremens. Harold promises to take Marjorie into the country next day. They have an exciting day. They miss the last train back to London. On his way to his lodgings, Harold sees a shooting affray during which one of the participants tosses a leather case to him. It contains letters in French written by King Raphael of Lesser Avaria.

CHAPTER V—Continued

The first thing that caught Harold's eye as he entered the room was Puddingface. Puddingface's hands were tied behind his back. With a heave and a wriggle he rose to his knees on the bed. His head was lost in a green baize bag (part of Harold's property), which was tied round his neck. Just about where Puddingface's mouth would be a white handkerchief was fastened tightly about his head, giving the effect of a vast mirthless grin extending all the way about Puddingface's green baize head.

Puddingface's feet were tied as well as his hands, and after poising balanced on his knees for a few wild seconds he pitched forward onto his nose again (if, indeed, there was a nose within that green baize bag).

By this time Harold began to realize that it was incumbent upon him to release Puddingface from his bonds. He drew out his penknife and cut the cords which were round his ankles, and untied the handkerchief and the string of the green baize bag. Puddingface's red and wrathful countenance emerged, as he sat up on the bed.

It was a minute or two before he could speak; during the interval he was engaged in spitting out shreds of green baize and even when he was able to speak his words were not at first wholly intelligible.

"The blank blanky blank blank blankers!" he said.

"Who are?" asked Harold.

"Danvers and Marks, of course. I came up here after dinner, and as I walked into the room those two blighters jumped on me and tied me up and put my head in a bag and threw me onto the bed. Then they undid all my clothes and threw me backward and forward and turned me upside down and nearly turned me inside out. They think they're jolly funny, the silly swine. Then they went round the room—I heard them—and threw everything about. Just look at the mess they've made."

They certainly had. Every drawer and cupboard in the room had been emptied and the contents strewn about the room. There was a certain system and order in the disorder which started an idea in Harold's mind, which in turn started a whole series of cold shivers down his spine.

"Are you sure it was Danvers and Marks?" he asked quaveringly.

"Of course it was," said Puddingface; "who would it be if it wasn't them? Mrs. Pound and Emmie?"

"No," said Harold. That was all he said, but he thought the more. Why, nothing would be easier than for a couple of evil-intentioned people to enter the house while all Scafe Fell View avenue was in the throes of devouring or digesting dinner. And the sort of person who would do this was the sort of person who went round shooting people on Morley common, and who would make no bones at all about tying Puddingface up and investigating his sacred person. Puddingface did not realize that he was lucky not to have had his head clubbed open or a bullet sent through the middle of the apple pie of which he had just eaten too much. Yet Puddingface, ignorant of his luck, indulged at that moment in a further torrent of blasphemy.

"I'll get even with the swine, see if I don't!" blared Puddingface. "D'you know if they're in?"

"Afraid I don't," said Harold.

"We could go and muck their room up the same as this if they were out," said Puddingface; the "we" in that speech was disturbing to Harold's peace of mind.

"Let's clear this mess up first, for goodness' sake," he said, desperately anxious to postpone the issue, and Puddingface agreed sulkily.

Of course, it was Harold who cleared up the mess. Puddingface was too busy standing about saying things. Harold took a furtive glance out of the window: sure enough the foreign-looking man was at the corner of the street, talking to his English friend. Moreover, twenty yards away from them were standing two more foreign-looking men. He felt suddenly sick and ducked hurriedly away from the window.

"What on earth can I do?" Harold asked himself pitifully, for the twentieth time that week-end. Give the letters back? But how, and to whom? Who was the rightful owner of the bally things, anyway? That writer or the recipient—the king or the lady? And if he tried to give them back wouldn't the other side bear him a grudge which they would do their best to repay? As far as he could see the only thing he could do was to hang on for a little while and find out what would be best. If he burned the things neither side would believe he had done so. Police? That was possible, but Harold shrank from the idea of walking into a police station with this fantastic story of princes and pistol shots. There would certainly be a dreadful scandal, and the murder on the common would have to be investigated with him as the principal witness, and there would be headlines in papers and photographs and all sorts of unpleasantness. And the bank would of course disapprove very strongly. He might lose his job! That clinched the matter for Harold. He would rather be murderously assaulted than risk dismissal. Then the tea bell rang downstairs, and Puddingface made a prompt exit.

Harold followed him only two seconds later. The two seconds were the time it took him to bolt and lock the bedroom windows—he was taking no chances. Then he scuttled after Puddingface. Harold most emphatically did not want to be alone.

At teatime Puddingface, with a tact amazing for him, elicited from Mrs. Pound the information that Messrs. Danvers and Marks had gone out soon after lunch and would not be back till late that night. As Mrs. Pound said this Puddingface looked across at Harold and favored him with a wink and a grin. Harold went on shivering all down his spine. Matters were growing far too complicated. Yet he did not see what he could do when after tea Puddingface grabbed him by the elbow and said in a hoarse whisper:

"Come on, now's our chance."

Danvers and Marks shared the first floor front, immediately under Harold's room. Puddingface dragged Harold in and shut the door; and then he exploded into action in a simply astonishing fashion.

"I'll show em what ragging is," said Puddingface, with the memory of an hour with his head in a bag and the rest of him exposed to the elements ranking like poison. Harold helped him unwillingly and ineffectively, and, as was evident from the energy Puddingface displayed, unnecessarily.

Puddingface began by emptying all drawers and cupboards, piling the contents in a heap on the floor, and dancing on them. He took the sheets and pillows and blankets from both beds, made them into a bundle, and tied the corners together with at least fifteen knots. He took razors and combs and brushes and hid them all round the room—on top of cupboards and up the chimney and in vases. He took down all the pictures and placed them between the mattresses and the springs of the beds. He squeezed toothpaste into slippers and shaving cream into pajama pockets. Finally he tied a long string in succession to every china article in the room, each of which he poised precariously on corners and shelves, and he made the end of the string fast to the leg of a bed so that the blight hung a foot from the floor across the door in such a fashion that a hasty step into the room would bring down every article in turn with a crash.

"That'll do now," whispered Puddingface. "That ought to show 'em."

It certainly would, decided Harold, appalled! "What are you going to do now?" he asked anxiously.

"Me? I'm goin' out for a bit. Goin' to see what girls there are on Morley common."

"Going out?" repeated Harold helplessly. That meant that if he stayed in he would be alone in the house, save for Mrs. Pound. He could not possibly bear that. Out in the streets, or on the crowded common, he would be safe. So would he be at the club. The club? No. Harold decided he did not want to go to the club.

German War Decoration

The war decoration worn by the Germans in the World war is sometimes mistaken for a Maltese cross, but it is the Iron cross and dates from the former Prussian kingdom. It was presented for the first time in 1813 for bravery and merit, regardless of rank. It was renewed in 1870 and again in 1914.

In 1813 the Iron cross had curved arms and a silver border. The front side was smooth, and the reverse had three oak leaves, the initials of the donor, and beneath that the year. In 1870 this cross bore the letter "W" for the kaiser's name, and above it a crown. It was the same in 1914 except for the change in dates.

Popular Northern Name

Eric denotes "ever royal" or "always kingly," from the two Teutonic words, "ei" (ever) and "rik" (a king or ruler). It was a famous name among the old Scandinavian and northern races who wrote it as Eirik and Earic. It has also a feminine form—Erica. Eric has been used for centuries among the old royal families of the North, because of its splendid meaning. Our most familiar form is "Richard" (stern king), and three kings of that name have sat upon the throne of England. —Montreal Herald.

The Order of the Purple Heart

Maj. Gen. C. B. Sumner

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

GEN. John J. Pershing, commander in chief of the A. E. F. in the World war, made repeated recommendations for the creation of a special decoration for our fighting men to be awarded in exceptional cases which would not come within the scope of the Congressional Medal of Honor, the Distinguished Service cross or the Distinguished Service medal, he did not know that authority for such a decoration was already in existence. In fact, had been in existence for nearly 140 years. It was not until John C. Fitzpatrick, formerly assistant chief of the manuscript division of the Library of Congress, now affiliated with the George Washington Bicentennial Celebration commission, revealed the result of researches which he had made several years ago, that the War department realized just such a decoration had been authorized way back in 1782 and, so far as it has been possible to learn, authority to award it has never been revoked either by congress or the President. While Gen. Charles P. Sumnerall was chief of staff, a study of the situation was made and a recommendation that the award of this decoration be resumed without additional authority from congress seemed probable. No definite action was taken at the time, however, but, with preparations for the nation-wide celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Washington nearing completion, it seems likely that this award may yet be re-established.

For it was George Washington who established this award, the first military decoration ever conferred by this country and the second oldest reward for valor in existence, being antedated only by the Russian Cross of St. George. Known officially as the "Badge of the Order of Military Merit," it is also referred to as the "Order of the Purple Heart" because of the shape of the badge. It consists of a heart-shaped piece of purple silk, fringed with lace, which was to be sewn on the left breast of the soldier's tunic.

A peculiar situation led Washington to establish the award. During the Revolution it was the custom for Washington and other generals to give commissions and promotions as rewards for valor. But congress decided that it alone had the power to issue commissions to officers and took that power away from the generals. Money was scarce and Washington could not use it as a reward, so he conceived the idea of awarding a badge of merit. Accordingly on August 2, 1782, he issued the following general order:

"The general, ever desirous to cherish a virtuous ambition in his soldiers, as well as to foster and encourage every species of military merit, directs that whenever any singularly meritorious action is performed, the author of it shall be permitted to wear on the facings over his left breast, the figure of a heart in purple cloth or silk, edged with narrow lace or binding.

"Not only instances of unusual gallantry, but also of extraordinary fidelity and essential service in any way shall meet with a due reward. Before this favor can be conferred on any man, the particular fact, or facts, on which it is to be grounded must be set forth to the commander in chief, accompanied with certificates from the commanding officers of the regiment and brigade to which the candidate for reward belonged, or other incontestable proofs, and upon granting it, the name and regiment of the person with the action so certified are to be enrolled in the book of merit which will be kept at the orderly office.

"Men who have merited this last distinction to be suffered to pass all guards and sentinels which officers are permitted to do.

"The road to glory in a patriot army and a free country is thus open to all—this order is also to have retrospect to the earliest stages of the war, and to be considered as a permanent one."

So far as it has been possible to learn, the only names ever written in the "book of merit" and the only men empowered to wear the Purple Heart badge were three sergeants in the Continental army—all from the state of Connecticut. They were Sergt. Elijah Churchill of the Second Continental dragoons, Sergt. Daniel Brown of the Fifth Connecticut regiment and Sergt. Daniel Bissell of the Second Connecticut regiment. The original citation of Sergeant Churchill's exploits which won him this award is preserved in the Library of Congress and states that "Sergt. Churchill of the 2nd, Regiment of Light Dragoons, in the several enterprises against Fort St. George and Fort Slongo on Long Island acted a very conspicuous and singularly meritorious part, in that at the head of each body of attack he not only acquitted himself with great gallantry, firmness and address, but that, the surprise in one instance and the success of the attack in the other, proceeded in a considerable degree from his conduct and management."

According to the story, as it has been dug out of musty old records by Mr. Fitzpatrick, Sergeant Churchill first attracted the attention of his superior officers for his daring in leading a dangerous raid inside the British lines before dawn on November 23, 1780. He again displayed outstanding valor in another hazardous raid right under the noses of the British on October 3, 1781. Both raids were planned and directed by Maj. Benjamin Tallmadge of the Second Continental dragoons, chief of Washington's intelligence service.

Major Tallmadge had received information concerning a huge supply of hay—several hundred tons of it—that had been stored for winter forage in a building at Coram, on the north shore of Long Island. Hay, in that day of cavalry supremacy, was one of the important supplies of warfare. Major Tallmadge relayed the information direct to General Washington, with an astounding plan for attempting not only to destroy the forage, but to storm a fortification which protected it. The intrepid major was authorized to make the attempt.

Late on the blustery afternoon of November 21, 1780, a detachment of half a hundred dismounted dragoons of the Second Continental embarked in whaleboats at Fairfield, Conn., and headed across the sound toward Fort St. George, 20 miles away, with Major Tallmadge in command. They landed about eight o'clock in the evening and deciding that it was too late to attempt a march on the fort they pulled their boats out of sight and camped for the night. All the next day they huddled in the woods, trying to keep warm, and when night came they set out at a rapid pace for the fort. By three o'clock in the morning they arrived, undiscovered, within two miles of Fort St. George. Here they halted for final orders.

Major Tallmadge divided his force into three groups, each assigned to storm a particular blockhouse. Sixteen of the most daring members were picked for the assault on the main blockhouse and Sergeant Churchill was put in command of this group. Just before dawn the three detachments moved toward the fort, taking different routes to minimize the chances of discovery and to enable them to launch concerted attacks from three different points.

The British sentinels seem to have been sleeping at their posts for they did not discover the attackers until Churchill and his men were less than 50 feet away and sprinting toward the walls. They immediately gave the alarm, but by this time the Americans had swarmed over the wall, crossed the ditch and were inside the stockade, where they opened fire on the British soldiers as they came tumbling out of their barracks.

"The other two attacking parties had expended their energies in getting inside the defenses and two blockhouses still remained to be taken," writes Mr. Fitzpatrick in an account of this battle, which appeared in the magazine of the Daughters of the American Revolution several years ago. "A brisk fire was beginning to pour upon the Americans from these two houses, but, battering parties beat in the doors and inside of 10 more minutes Tallmadge's men had possession of the entire works."

"The growing light now showed a British supply schooner at anchor close to the shore near the fort. A detachment captured her with ridiculous ease. The rapidity of the attack had protected the attackers and they had not lost a man, and only one of them was wounded. The British loss was several killed and wounded and most of the latter were mortally hurt."

"The fort and the schooner were set on fire and the prisoners, over 50 in number, were started back toward the boats under a guard. Leaving a small force to see to it that the fort was completely destroyed, Tallmadge marched with the rest toward Coram."

"The few sentries found there fled, and the hay was pulled loose and set on fire. Over 300 tons went up in rolling clouds of smoke and as soon as the fire was going beyond all hope of extinguishment, Tallmadge and his hay burners started back toward their boats."

"The party of Americans reached their hidden boats late in the afternoon, after one or two brief skirmishes with the pursuers, and the force succeeded in getting away from shore without casualties. They arrived back at Fairfield before midnight."

That was the first of the affairs which won for Churchill the Purple Heart decoration. The next was in the following October when Washington made plans for destroying Fort Slongo, located on the north shore of Long Island, northeast of Brooklyn. Again Major Tallmadge secured the necessary exact information which led to the attack on this post. The attacking party consisted of 100 men from the Fifth Connecticut regiment and the Second Continental dragoons. Maj. Lemuel Trescott, a Massachusetts officer, volunteered to lead the party.

"The expedition started across the sound at eight o'clock in the evening of October 2, 1781," writes Mr. Fitzpatrick, "and at three o'clock in the morning the fort was in its hands."

"Again Sergeant Churchill was in the van of the first attacking party and again he acquitted himself with the utmost gallantry. The fort was so strong that Tallmadge had advised Trescott not to make a direct attack, but to try to draw off the defenders by a feint. This idea was not followed, the attacking force went at their job with such vigor that the fort was taken without the loss of a single man and only four of the British force were killed before the works surrendered."

"The report of the affair shows 21 prisoners taken, and the destruction of a goodly quantity of artillery and stores or arms, ammunition and clothing."

Sergeant Brown was his Purple Heart 12 days later at Yorktown. The citation of the board of awards, dated April 24, 1783, is among the Washington papers in the Library of Congress. The board was composed of Brig. Gen. John Groaton, Col. Walter Stewart, Lieut. Col. Ebenezer Sprout and Maj. Nicholas Fish and Lemuel Trescott.

The board declared that Sergeant Brown, "in the assault of the enemy's left redoubt at Yorktown, in Virginia, on the evening of October 14, 1781, conducted a forlorn hope with great bravery, propriety and deliberate firmness and that his general character appears unexceptionable."

Sergeant Brown was serving under Lieut. Col. Alexander Hamilton, who had been assigned the task of taking one of two British redoubts that were stubbornly resisting the siege of Yorktown. The other redoubt was to be attacked by allied French troops. The Americans volunteered to storm the outer redoubt, which was close to the river, and the French were to attack the inner redoubt.

The sergeant led his "forlorn hope" at the forefront of the attackers and refused even to await destruction of the abatis and other obstructions. Calling to his men to follow closely, he surmounted all the obstacles and led his men directly into the redoubt. A withering barrage failed to stop them, and the unbelievable courage of the little party so confounded the defenders that the redoubt surrendered in less than 15 minutes from the time Brown and his men launched the attack. The American losses were comparatively few.

As for the exploit which won the Purple Heart decoration for Sergeant Bissell, the record is far from complete, due to the fact that it was in line of duty as a spy. In order to accomplish his mission he had to "desert" from the American army and in the faded Revolutionary records in the War department he is listed as a deserter. But the citation for the Purple Heart decoration, contained in Washington's General Orders for June 8, 1783, while it does not contain the full story of Bissell's heroism, contains a hint of what it must have been and removes from his name the stigma attached to it by the notation in the official records. The citation reads as follows: "Sergt. Bissell of the 2nd, Connecticut Regiment having performed some important services within the immediate knowledge of the Commander-in-Chief, in which the fidelity, perseverance and good sense of the said Sergt. Bissell were conspicuously manifested, it is, therefore, ordered: That he be honored with the badge of merit; he will call at headquarters on Thursday next for the insignia and certificate to which he is hereby entitled."

So far as it is possible to reconstruct the story, Bissell "deserted" from the army in August, 1781, and made his way into New York city. His mission was to obtain all the information he could about the plans of the British and to stay no longer than was necessary to accomplish his purpose. A year passed and nothing was heard from Bissell by his regimental officer, Lieut. Col. Robert Hanson Harrison, or his commander in chief. For all that they knew his mission may have been discovered by the British and he may have paid the usual penalty for being a spy. Then one day in September, 1782, Bissell reported at Washington's headquarters at Newburgh, N. Y., and made his verbal report which was taken down by Lieut. Col. David Humphreys.

WAR ON PESTS COSTLY

Few persons, even among those engaged in the fight, realize the enormous cost of the warfare which must be continually waged against the various forms of insect pests. It is estimated that the time and money expended for this purpose in the United States represents a loss of two billion dollars a year.

In spite of this mighty effort, insects and plant diseases destroy between 10 and 15 per cent of all food raised. This situation also confronts Canada and South America and to a large extent the entire world.

Grasshoppers and corn borers have caused much damage of late, and among others which are particularly destructive may be mentioned the Japanese beetle, boll weevil, leaf hopper, red spider and an almost endless list of minor pests.

An eminent scientist declares that if continuous warfare were not waged against these destructive agencies they would cause a loss of 60 per cent of all crops. It is therefore imperative that every possible means should be employed to check their ravages.

FISH AND GAME NOTES

By J. H. NEUSTADT

Millions of fish throughout the United States are in danger of perishing in the smaller streams, lakes, ponds, bayous and pot holes because of the drought, according to reports to the American Game Protective Association. Sportsmen, conservation officials and others are doing what they can to rescue the endangered fish and transfer them to permanent bodies of water.

The "June rise" in the South took fish into the backwaters, depositing them in small shallow lakes and drainage ditches. The drought and evaporation has so depleted the water area that in hundreds of places the fish can be seen floundering with their dorsal fins out of the water as their underparts scrape the bottom. Many thousands have already died and millions are in danger of immediate death.

If you learn of any such conditions in your locality, please notify the nearest game warden, sportsman's organization, or deputy sheriff, Carlos Avery, president of the American Game Protective Association, urges.

This perilous condition seems to obtain in practically every state, for the long drought was nation-wide. And perhaps the worst is yet to come. So, if we may urge, please do everything you can to rescue fish in such a state and transfer them to permanent water. This is a conservation activity everyone may engage in with profit to the nation, state, town and community, for practically every one fishes.

"If America doesn't conserve its wild life, song birds will sing by request, probably on mechanical records, deer, bear and raccoon will be seen in zoos and museums, and wild fowl will be only a name," according to Carlos Avery, president of the American Game and Protective Association.

"We must redouble our efforts to not only conserve but restore all wild life, particularly now that drought, forest fires and floods have destroyed so many of the wild folks and fish."

"Drought is forcing nature to come into the barnyards of man. Wild ducks nested on a slough near Regina, Sask., Canada, but the slough dried up soon after the hatch. One mother duck with her fluffy brood made a trek of a mile to a farmyard pump. The babies couldn't reach the water in the trough, so the mother duck, according to the Regina Leader, immersed herself, jumped out, and the baby ducks were seen sipping water from her feathers. The sympathetic farmer's wife filled a large pan and put it in the barnyard. The little ducks couldn't scramble in, so the mother duck managed to dump her brood into the drink. The ducks remained near the water supply, showing little fear of the woman. Deer and other animals are coming in to water troughs in barnyards at night. Tracks are reported in many localities.

Carlos Avery, president of the American Game Protective Association, is calling on the motorists to be more careful in their driving at night. Mr. Avery figures that a rabbit is killed each year, and that means that the motorists kill about as many rabbits as the hunters, as the motor lights blind the rabbits and they fall easy prey if the motorist is not very careful. Unfortunately most of these rabbits are killed at mating time, which means that potential stock is also destroyed.

SIDELIGHTS

Otto Knudsen, an Eskimo of the Faroe Islands, went crazy upon seeing his first motion picture and had to be taken to a Copenhagen asylum for treatment. We can readily understand how a highly emotional person might be so affected by some of the movies we have seen.

A striking example of child-like faith was shown by a 10-year-old Detroit girl, who wrote a letter saying: "Please send me $20. I need it," and addressed it to "God, City of Detroit." Her request was not granted, probably because the postal authorities made the mistake of delivering the letter to the mayor.

Unemployment among printers should be materially lessened, in the vicinity of Washington at least, by the work necessary to publish the 1930 census report, which will be issued in 24 volumes, three of which will be devoted to agriculture. These will doubtless explain why the farmers should be prosperous, but aren't.

Navy men were perturbed recently when defects were discovered in eight new cruisers. In five of them flaws were found in the rudder castings, which might cause the rudder to carry away under unusual stress. These flaws were photographed with the aid of radium rays, half a gram of radium having been lent by Johns Hopkins University for the purpose.

The setting hen will soon be a victim of the machine age if electrical incubators continue to gain in popularity in future as in the recent past. In New Jersey alone ten million baby chicks were hatched during the past season and raised to maturity without ever hearing an old Biddy's cluck.

When H. P. Re of Coldwater, Mich., died recently, a reporter jumped at the conclusion that Re's name was the shortest known, and so wrote in his story. It has since developed that there are others, including F. Ax of Indianapolis, E. Py of Newcastle, Ind., J. Ur of Torrington, Conn., and shortest of all, A. A. of Chicago.

The Prince of Wales, who is no great golfer, made his second hole-in-one of the season a few days ago. There are now 16,425 members of the International Hole-in-One club. Tom Washington of New Jersey has made 23; Bobby Jones only one in his life; Billy Burke, new open champion, none.

Someone with uncommon common sense induced office building operators in Charlotte, N. C., to place this sign in their elevators: "Men are asked to keep their hats on. Removing hats reduces elevator capacity and creates confusion. Thinking women will welcome this. It offers no disrespect and adds to their comfort."

Representative Sapp of Florida has discovered that he is entitled to take 52 extra holidays each year—if he can get away with it. An old state law designates Sundays and various other days as legal holidays, also providing that when a legal holiday falls on Sunday it shall be observed on the following day. As every Sunday is a legal holiday, Mr. Sapp contends that every Monday should be observed to conform to the law.

If an alumnus of the University of Nebraska were to enter the office of the premier of Latvia, in Riga, he might be surprised to see the college colors of his alma mater on the wall. But the explanation would be simple. Premier Karl Ullman is a graduate of the University of Nebraska.

John R. Voorhis, president of the New York City board of elections, presided over a meeting of his board on his 102nd birthday, July 27. He gave no prescription for long life. Some of his friends, however, attribute his present good health to the fact that he does not smoke, having given up the habit when he was 98.

MONTEREY TO DISBURSE FOODS AT STATE FAIR

Solving the food problem for many, Monterey county will give away thousands of pounds of her food products to visitors registering at the county's booth at the 1931 California State Fair, September 5 to 12. This was announced yesterday by A. A. Tavernetti, of Salinas, chairman of the county's advisory exhibit committee.

The provisions to be given away are as follows: 320 cases of canned sardines from 20 canneries, 96 cases of condensed milk from three plants, 32 boxes of apples, 40 boxes of artichokes, 32 cases of canned artichokes, spinach, apricots and peaches, 1,600 pounds of sugar, hundreds of crates of head lettuce, and 1,600 pounds of small pink beans, grown only at King City and in Madagascar.

In addition to giving the food to visitors, Miss Pauline Freden, of Elk Horn, Monterey county, will demonstrate different ways of preparing and cooking these Monterey products. For example, thirty ways of serving artichokes will be shown. Each day of the fair the booth will be successfully in charge of the following districts of the county: King City, Soledad, Gonzales, Salinas, Castroville, Northern Monterey county, Carmel, and Monterey and Pacific Grove.

CROSS-CONTINENT RECORD SHATTERED BY NEW PLYMOUTH

San Francisco to New York and return in 132 hours—

On this record-breaking trip a New Plymouth Sedan, standard in every detail, covered 6287 miles at an average speed of 47.52 miles per hour and more than 1140 miles a day.

This smashed the existing two-way transcontinental mark, set between Los Angeles and New York, by 9½ hours—the San Francisco-New York record by nearly 36 hours.

These marks were formerly held by cars costing several times the Plymouth price.

No greater example can be given of the astounding ruggedness, endurance and stamina of the New Plymouth. No finer proof can be offered of its performance, its power, its handling ease, its safety and its roadability.

Take a ride in the New Plymouth. Experience for yourself the performance which made this phenomenal record possible.

A young man wishing to insure himself was asked: "Are your parents alive?" "No, sir, both dead." "How old was your father when he died?" "One hundred and five." "And what was the cause of his death?" "Fell off his bicycle going to work."

"What is your new brother's name?" Little Jane: "I do not know yet. We can't understand a word he says."

Almost everybody seems to be confident about business, except his business.

"The world has an opening for everyone." "It had for me. I'm in the hole right now."

Whirlwind "Has you all got a sweetheart, Liza?" "Sistah, Ah suah has, an' he's a regular gen'l'mun." "How come?" "Wal, he done took me to dinnah las' nite an' poured his coffee in a saucer; but he didn't blow it lak common folks—he done fanned it wid his hat."

"I doctor myself by the aid of medical books."

"Yes, and some day you'll die of a misprint."

"Before we were married you used to call me your angel."

"Yes, I remember."

"Now you call me nothing."

"That shows my self-control."
